PRIMITIVE MAN

By ELLIS MORE.

Professor Hudiberg had heavy, bushy eyebrows, knuckly hands and features that were rugged. There was no experiment that he would not attempt. He was brave in that way. But when it came to making Helen Burne's acquaintance there his heart failed.

And Helen Burne was of all the girls who studied under him the very one he wanted to know.

"I never could understand," he said to her one day when he had at last got up courage enough to talk with her aside from the necessary instructions in the laboratory, "why you chose to specialize in chemistry."

Helen looked up at him with bewilderment, test tube in hand. "Am I really so stupid?" she asked, and her eyes of blue were very wide open.

"Indeed, it is not that. Perhaps I have said more than I ought."

"Not at all," Helen replied, putting down the test tube and wiping her acid-stained hands on her enveloping apron. "I see what you mean. You mean that in your native land blondes like me would be picked for the career of a housewife. I suppose you will have no use for me when you know that I am a suffragist. I've just been elected president of the club here at college."

One day—it was Saturday, with no laboratory hours—Helen came unceremoniously into the laboratory.

"Oh, Professor Hudiberg," she began, "I have just thought that you would do for a part in the suffrage pageant we are getting up. Tell me you will, please. I've gone over the list of all the men in college, and there isn't another one that looks like you. Will you?"

"Yes," said the professor happily. "Oh, lovely," she said clasping her hands. "You see, we are going to depict the evolution of woman from primitive times to the present day. We are going to have the primitive man tramping down the primitive woman. You'll do beautifully for that. You are so—what shall I call it? Well, you have such wonderful dark, bushy eyebrows and you are so—rugged."

"I am afraid—but I gave my promise." There was a twinkle in the professor's dark eye. Clearly he was very much amused. "By any chance are you going to be the primitive woman?"

"Oh, no, indeed. I am going to be the emancipated woman. That's because I am president of the society. I shall wear a long, flowing Greek tunic, with my hair down my back—and all the arts and sciences will come before me—those will be some of the college boys dressed to symbolize the different subjects—and pay me tribute."

The professor closed his eyes slightly and looked at her with a puzzled air.

"Yes, that is a very good idea," he said after a pause. "But you are not the one for the part. One of those tall young persons—there are so many Amazons in your class—would do much better for that final tableau. That is only my suggestion. You would not really like always to remain on that pedestal—alone, independent, self-reliant, would you?"

Helen blushed in spite of herself and said precisely what she did not wish to say: "That depends a great deal on circumstances. No, I should probably become very lonely. Still, it is all arranged. I must not change the plans."

Work for the suffrage pageant progressed. Helen put many hours into the work. The affair promised to be a really splendid production. Helen had worked herself pale and worn over it and, truth to tell, had sadly neglected her studies because of it.

Then one day—it was the week after the midterm quizzes—a very pale little Helen appeared rather timidly in the laboratory of Professor Hudiberg.

"I wanted to tell you," she began, and then swallowed a choke in her voice and went on, "that I am no longer to have anything to do with the suffrage pageant. It will be carried out as I planned. But on the results of the quizzes I have had my warning note from the office. That means, you know, that I can take no more active part in college activities till I have raised my standard. It is fair, I suppose. I am glad, at least, that you didn't have to give me a bad mark."

"I should have been very sorry, I am sure," said the professor, "if you had done anything but good work in my department. What, then, of the primitive man?"

"That was what I was going to say. The pageant will go on without me, of course. They will want you for rehearsal tomorrow afternoon. I have rehearsed everyone else."

"Then you can please tell them that they will have to find a new primitive man. I made my promise to you, not to your successor. I had hoped for a means of escape, although I am sorry that it should be one that is unpleasant to you."

So far during this interview the young professor had been formal, embarrassed, and as was usual in such circumstances, he spoke with rather more of an accent than he ordinarily did. Helen had turned to leave the laboratory when he saw just the suggestion of a tear standing out in her blue eyes.

"Helen," he said, "I love you." (Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

OHIO CITY WELCOMES "WILLIES"

Bellevue Mayor Extends Glad Hand to Friendless Vags; Feeds Wanderers,
then Offers Hospitality of Municipal Rock Pile

By United Press.

Bellevue, O., May 9.—If you have tramps or vagabonds you don't want just put them on the train for Bellevue. They'll be cheerfully received. The new official system here makes the advent of a few "boes" a joyous occasion.

The bum is a municipal asset to Bellevue. Here are a few of the things they have done for this town of 6,000 souls:

Polished the streets; carried off the rubbish from every back yard; put the baseball diamond in fine condition and started a sewer system for the city. After the sewer is completed they'll be put to work paving new streets.

The nice thing about it all, the boes do these things willingly, cheerfully—after they've seen the stone pile. They are given their choice of the two.

Take the case of Banjo Charlie, who recently swung off a side door pullman. While looking for the "welcome" chalk mark on a gate post or back door, he was greeted by Chief of Police Charles Buckland, who said cheerily:

"Come right up to the city hall and register. Glad to see you."

Banjo Charlie followed the line of least resistance.

"Want you to meet our mayor," said Buckland.

"Good morning, judge," said Charlie suspiciously.

"Good morning," responded Mayor H. C. Aurand, pleasantly. "Five and costs."

Then the new arrival got his first line of Bellevue's hospitality. He was wafted into the combination jail, dining hall and kitchen.

"Here's the makin's," said Chief Buckland, thrusting into Charlie's paw some eggs, bacon and a skillet. A small stove was in the corner.

"Do I gotta get my own breakfast?" enquired Charlie, peevish.

"You certainly do," said Buckland. "You'll be doing lots of things for yourself before you leave."

After breakfast Charlie was led to the stone pile, a ball and chain affixed to his leg, and a heavy sledge placed in his hands.

"Would you mind sweeping a little mud off our streets this morning?" Charlie was asked, casually.

"I'd dearly love to," was the prompt response.

All tramps are given eleven days as soon as apprehended. They are required to do their own cooking. Vags are allowed to sell junk gleaned from the rubbish carted away, and keep the money.

BARRED ON TECHNICALITY.

Through mispronunciation of the word "blithsome" by the official pronouncer at the state spelling contest, according to County Superintendent Shepard, Lucile Arnett, of Verdun, Grady county's prize winner in the county spelling contest, failed for place. As Miss Arnett understood the word it was pronounced "blithsome," and spelling it as pronounced, the young lady was counted out. In the Grady contest Miss Arnett, who is but twelve years old, spelled the total number of 150 words pronounced.

ANTIDOTE FOR BICHLORIDE.
Cincinnati, May 9.—The discovery of an effective antidote for bichloride of mercury poisoning is announced by Dr. J. H. Wilms, and endorsed by city health officers; and our dependents may now be deprived of their favorite method of committing slow suicide.
The remedy consists of calcium sulphate, given intravenously grain for grain, of the poison taken; one grain of calcium sulphate to one ounce of water within 48 hours after poison has been taken.

The Boy is Father to the Man

Old sayings like this are fraught with a most important meaning. And what will aid the expectant mother in conserving her health, her strength, her mental repose and the absence of vexatious pains is a subject of vast moment. Among the recognized helps is a splendid remedy known as "Mother's Friend." Applied to the muscles it sinks in deeply to make them firm and pliant, it thus lifts the strain on ligaments that produce pain, it lightens the burden on the nervous system, induces calm, restful nights of health-giving sleep, and makes the days sunny and happy. Get a bottle of "Mother's Friend" of any druggist and you will then realize why it has been considered true to its name in our best homes through three generations. It is perfectly harmless but so effective that once used it is recommended to all expectant mothers by those who went through the ordeal with surprising ease. By writing to Bradfield Regulator Co., 712 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., you can have a free copy of a wonderful book that unfolds those things which all expectant mothers delight to read. Write today.
It is mailed free. Among its features are an explanation of the remedy's action, the first positions, prepartory uneasiness, drowsiness, how to be comfortable, and a great variety of topics all bearing upon the one subject of expectant motherhood. Then there are many letters which describe actual experiences, making of it a guide book of great value. Don't fail to write for this book.
